A horse was stolen from Jim Phillips, near Fulton, Saturday night, and the thief borrowed a saddle from Joe Lawson to finish the equipment. Nothing has been heard of the thief.

Will C. Price, formerly a partner with Capt. Lee Campbell in the ownership of the tug Oscar Keefer, of this place, was run down and killed by a train at Cairo Saturday. Many of our readers will remember this young man.

On Monday afternoon the Colored Base Ball team of this city played a game with the Covington Giants, the negroes of Hickman play some very smooth games but they lost their luck and let Covington beat them the score being 10 to 7 in favor of the visiting team.

W. T. Green and wife, of Greenfield, Tenn., moved to Hickman, Saturday and will locate here. Mr. Green will be remembered as the gentleman who came here to investigate the suicide of Riley Higgins which happened in this city a year ago last August. Higgins left an empty laudanum bottle on a barge and a note of farewell, saying he had drowned himself. This gentleman, whose tragic death aroused our sympathies, is now raising a cotton crop at Byers, Texas. His bondsmen, who were left with the "bag to hold" at Greenfield, may yet bring him back to answer an ugly charge.

Lester French Killed

Sid. L. Dodds Shoots and Instantly Kills Lester French in Difficulty Last Saturday Morning.

TRAGEDY RESULT OF THREATS MADE BY VICTIM.

Slayer Surrendered to Sheriff and is Exonerated at Preliminary Hearing Yesterday.

A deplorable tragedy occurred here Saturday morning about 8:30 when Sidney L. Dodds, one of the best known and influential citizens of this city, shot and instantly killed Lester French, a young man who was engaged by Geo. Evans on a farm a few miles below town.

The trouble which led to the tragedy has been brewing for several days. From the information we can gather, the facts in the case were about as follows:

Two weeks ago Lester French and two other men whipped a negro that worked on the Dodds farm in the lower bottom. What caused the friction between the negro and the whites we do not know, but the white men were arrested on this account and cited to appear for trial before Judge W. A. Naylor Saturday afternoon of the day on which the killing occurred. It is alleged that French made threats of violence against Mr. Dodds on this account and these threats reached his ears.

Saturday morning Mr. Dodds started to his farm in his auto, carrying with him his shotgun. At the east end of Seymour lane, about 1½ miles west of town, he stopped his car to fill the water tank on the machine from the ditch by the roadside and had pulled to one side for this purpose. While thus engaged, a buggy, occupied by four men approached from the opposite direction. The men in the vehicle were Geo. Evans, Bill Jones, Bill Evans and Lester French.

The account of the affair as given by Mr. Dodds on the witness stand yesterday afternoon in his preliminary hearing was about as follows:

"Saturday morning I started to my bottom place in my automobile to look after some business; among other things I had a mule colt which had been hurt in a wire fence. I took with me my automatic gun, as I had been warned by several people that Lester French had threatened my life and advised me to be prepared to meet him. Charlie Jackson told me he heard French make the threat, and Sheriff Johnson, Tom Dillon, Sid Hamby, John Wright, all officers who had had dealings with him also C. L. Walker, who knew him well, told me he was a dangerous man and not to let him get the drop on me. I had also heard of him making attempts to carry out some of his former threats, and I was afraid he came here."

Deceased was buried at the city cemetery upon advice from his brother to "put him away decent."

The trial yesterday resulted in Mr. Dodds' release, the Commonwealth being absolutely unable to make any fight to the contrary. When Judge Naylor announced the verdict, a wild cheer went up from the packed house followed by a touching scene on the part of the defendant and those dear to him who wept with joy.

Deceased was unmarried, about 30 years old, and had resided in and near Hickman for the past five years. Most of the time he was in the employ of the Mengel Box Co., on their quarter boats. His home is said to be at Perryville, Tenn., where he has a brother, also a brother at Paris, Tenn. The general reputation of Lester French was not to be envied. When drinking, which was a frequent occurrence, he was quarrelsome and has been in considerable trouble here as the court records will show. It may be said in the scant eulogy of the poor fellow that he was big hearted and kept his peace when sober, drinking was the link that weakened the chain of his character. Had he known less of rum, he might have considered more seriously the debt of gratitude which he owed the man whose life he threatened. More than once Dodds had been instrumental in getting French out of jail and other scrapes, with no object in view more than helping him who could not help himself.

He had used the word "we" in saying what he was going to do, I believed I had the four men to deal with. Before I could get to my gun two of them were out of the buggy. I got hold of the gun and the first shot fired went off accidentally—maybe two shots—and by this time French was getting out of the buggy, and I noticed he had something white in his hand as though he might have something wrapped up. My last shot was aimed at French and it hit him on his plantation to his millionaire friends. He is a self-made man whose efforts have been crowned with success, but wealth has never made a fool of him. Few men have ever done for Hickman what Sid Dodds has done. His friends certainly regret that this sad affair has been forced upon him.

Mrs. Kistner Dead.

Mrs. Missouri V. Kistner, wife of John Kistner, a well known and highly respected lady of this city, died at her home in West Hickman Monday night at 7:30, after an illness of three years.

Deceased was about 50 years old and had spent 35 years of her life in Hickman. She is survived by her husband and two children, Hollie Kistner, and a married daughter in St. Louis whose name we are unable to learn. For many years she was a member of the Presbyterian church, and as good woman as ever lived.

Funeral services were held at the grave by Rev. Stockton at 3:30 this afternoon. Burial at the City Cemetery.

The bereaved ones have the sympathy of their many friends.

SURELY POET KNEW

"SWEETLY UNREASONABLE," SAID HE, OF THE GENTLE SEX.

At Least to the Shoe Clerk His Words Are as Gospel—The Comedy in Selection of her New Footgear.

"When a woman has a new pair of shoes sent home," said the cynical salesman, "she goes to work at 'em very unlike a man under similar circumstances."

"She never shoves her toes into them and yanks at 'em till she's red in the face, nor after getting them on at last does she go stamping around, telling those shoes with great frankness what her opinion is of 'em and of herself for ever countenancing 'em. No."

"She pulls 'em carefully part way on; twitches 'em off again to take another look at 'em to see whether she has got the right shoe on the left foot and left shoe on the right foot; pulls 'em all the way on; looks at 'em dreamily; says they seem to fit so well that she's afraid they'll get too big by and by; takes another look at 'em; twists 'em around to take a side view, gives a little scream, and exclams:

"Oh, my, there's a wrinkle already! Mercy, how loose they are!"

"Then she looks at 'em again square in front; works the feet around to find if she can't induce the shoes not to hurt quite so much; takes the shoes off, looks at the heels, the toes, the soles, and the interior; puts 'em on again; walks up and down the room once or twice, and declares positively to her husband, sitting by:

"They're horrid! I won't have them at any price!"

"Then she tilts down the looking glass on the dresser so she can see how they appear viewed from all the positions the mirror will reflect 'em to her, backs off, trips sidewise, steps nearer, nearly dislocates her neck trying to see how they look from impossible points of view, takes another farewell glance at 'em from all positions, sits down and says:

"They make my feet look too horrid for anything, and as if I were wearing at least three and a half! They never will do in the world!"

"Then she takes 'em off, turns 'em over, inspects them heel, toe, sole and inside all over again, smooths out a wrinkle, pulls at the buttons and says:

"Every button on them will drop off the first time I go out in them, I know! And those heels! They look almost ridiculously low enough to be common sense heels. The idea!"

"Then she draws 'em on again, takes 'em off, puts 'em on, looks 'em over again in the mirror this, that and the other way, takes 'em off and says:

"John, dear, won't you give me your idea about these shoes? You have such excellent taste and judgment in such things."

"Then if John is wise he will look 'em over and say that they look to him absurdly high as to heel, thin as to sole and too tight around the instep."

"Oh, do you, dear? she will say, and thank him sweetly."

"Then she will try 'em on again, show them off before the mirror, sit down, run her hand over 'em gently, smile, ring for the maid and say to her:

"You may tell the messenger, Jane, that I will keep the shoes."

"And everybody is satisfied. So much better than a man's is the way of a woman with a pair of new shoes."

Her Threat.

The little grass widow and the man from the west had dined together several evenings at Balogh's, but the handsome man at the other end of the table never had looked at them once, says the New York Press. No matter how interesting they purposely made their conversation he never batted an eye, just sat there over his wine and his paper.

"Isn't he the handsome brute?" whispered the little grass widow. "And never to notice me!"

"I believe," her companion whispered back, "that he listens to every word we say. I don't believe he misses anything."

"You just wait," warned the little grass widow, "till some fine night when I come down here all by myself and ask him for the salt. Then see what happens!"

His Daily "Stunt."

Rameses II. was showing his royal guest from Babylonia through an Egyptian newspaper office.

"Here," he explained, "are copies of our paper, all ready for mailing. Each copy is two feet thick, weighs 800 pounds, and is made of the finest limestone. That crowd of young men on our left, busy with mallets and chisels, are our reporters and special writers."

"How interesting!" cried Bel-Shar-Uz IV., "but tell me—who is the young man carving grotesque hieroglyphics on yonder lofty pillar?"

"Oh!" chuckled the Pharaoh, "that is the humorist, getting up his funny column!"

Rubber Hose Connects with Spigot and Outlet at Sink, Enabling Woman to Clean Sink.

One of the most useful of all recent inventions for the home is the drainpipe cleaner designed by a Michigan man. This not only enables a woman to keep her kitchen sink clean by having the pipe free, but it saves the expense which is sometimes incurred of having the pipe cleaned by a plumber. A long rubber hose has its upper end adapted to be fitted to the spigot. The lower end terminates in a bell mouth which is made thick at the top to prevent its collapsing and thin at the extremity to form a flexible lip. This lip is fitted over the drain and held there by suction and the water turned on. In this way the full pressure of water is forced through the drain pipe, flushing it very effectively and washing out all the extraneous matter that is bound to accumulate no matter how careful a woman or her servants may be—and the latter are often not careful at all. There is also a lateral air inlet near the top of the hose.

Reversible Turbines.

One of the objections urged against turbine engines has been their inability to run backward as well as forward. John Ogg of Aberdeen has invented a form of turbine which avoids this difficulty. The steam enters the machine through a hollow axle, and thence acts upon the wings of the rotating disks mounted upon the axle.

When it is desired to reverse the motion, a new set of disks, having their wings set at a reverse angle, are brought into play, and by means of grooved valves the steam is projected against them, thus producing a backward motion. The reversal of motion can be produced instantaneously.
